CASE STUDY: LAKE ARROWHEAD

PROJECT DETAILS:

The challenge at Lake Arrowhead was to design a contemporary style, energy-efficient house with large windows that blur the lines between inside and out. The homeowner wanted modern details and interiors, and to take advantage of the beautiful lake-front view. "A variety of materials were incorporated on the exterior and we wanted the windows to stand out," said architect Bryan Jones. "We needed windows with a warm, dark bronze clad to fit into the surrounding wooded setting, while providing a clean, modern look," Jones added

INTEGRITY SOLUTION:

Jones, a Certified Passive House Consultant® selected Integrity® All Ultrex® and Wood-Ultrex® products. An expansive line of contemporary design styles feature clean sight lines with narrow profiles and generous glass proportions to enhance the outside view and provide maximum day lighting. Integrity doors work seamlessly with their windows, creating consistent sight lines, dimensions and aesthetics.

Integrity windows and doors enabled significant energy savings but the ability to paint the windows was a key factor. Unlike vinyl, Ultrex is fully paintable with no impact to its material performance or warranty coverage. Ultrex pultruded fiberglass is the first and only finish to be verified to AAMA's 624-10 finish specifications,* resisting fading, chalking, scratching and cracking.

*The Ultrex patented acrylic cap finish is verified AAMA 623-10 and 624-10, and has passed the AAMA 625-10 lab based performance test protocols; 625-10 outdoor weathering test protocols in process.

At Marvin®, we’re constantly monitoring our customers’ evolving tastes and have identified the following key trends that we expect will affect the building industry in 2015.

Corner windows can add design interest to both the interior and exterior of a contemporary home. Maximize views and capture light from multiple angles with this unique window. DESIGN DETAILS

CONTEMPORARY DESIGN ELEMENTS

You can expect a demand in such contemporary design elements as pearlescent exterior finishes, including copper and silver colors, satin nickel hardware, dark interior stains, and beautiful ebony exteriors. Another contemporary look is to install windows with “square sticking,” which include a clean, squared-off transition where the window’s glass meets wood, creating the minimal detailing emblematic of contemporary design. Discover great ideas like these and more at your local Marvin and Integrity Dealer.

CASE STUDY: DOWN TO EARTH

PROJECT DETAILS:

The ultimate significance of this home comes from a dynamic exchange between sensible materials being put to good use and organic thinking. The homeowners had several requests on their wish list—that the building be sustainable, and that it provide all the benefits of natural light. A variety of sustainable attributes were incorporated into the home, from in-floor heating, up to a sod roof. Daylighting was a significant factor in the success of this house. Concrete buttresses and timbers on the east elevation provide both architectural interest and shade from the summer sun. Angled light enters the rooms in cooler months, heating up the concrete floors. South-facing windows and skylights mark the passage of time and enliven the rooms with natural light and solar warmth.

MARVIN SOLUTION:

Windows, instead of repeating rhythmically throughout the home in a traditional fashion, are placed unexpectedly. They were conceived as interruptions in the concrete walls and applied in a thoughtful variety of ways. Direct glaze windows over the kitchen work counter and next to the fireplace occur more like holes in the wall than windows. Other windows have interior surrounds painted in a dark color to contrast with the concrete, or are inset to add sculptural dimension to the exterior walls. “Marvin® windows and doors provide great opportunities to play with details that add contrast and interest,” Architect Katherine Hillbrand comments. Innovative placement of windows adds a distinctive warmth, no matter what the season, to this contemporary northern home.
